

Mark Baugher is a Technical Leader in Cisco Systems' Research and Advanced Development group where he focuses on home networking. Prior to Cisco, Mark co-founded and served as chief technical officer of Passedge Incorporated, which sold a multicast media security product. Mark has worked in data communications since 1983, when he maintained a distance vector routing protocol for an international time-sharing network. Over the years, Mark has authored, co-authored and edited several widely used international standards in the IETF, ISMA and presently in the UPnP Forum™. Mark holds an M.A in Computer Sciences from the University of Texas at Austin and a B.A. in Economics, With Distinction, from the University of Missouri - Kansas City.